LABOR DAY PROCLAMATION

Gov. Willson Issues Orders
For Holiday.

All Who Respect Themselves or Deserve Respect Toil
Faithfully.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 30.—In a proclamation which was issued this afternoon, Gov. Willson sets apart September 6 as Labor Day, on which he says no one shall be compelled to do any work. He urges that everybody in the State join in celebrating the day. The proclamation is as follows: Commonwealth of Kentucky, Executive Department, Office of the Governor.—Labor Day Proclamation.—To the People of Kentucky.—According to the written law of this Commonwealth, and the spirit and custom of our people, and with most cordial devotion to this law and custom, as Governor of Kentucky, I proclaim Monday, the sixth day of September, A. D. 1909, as Labor Day, and set it apart as a day on which no one shall be compelled against his wishes to pursue the usual occupations. I call upon all of our people to observe the day as a legal holiday in honor of all faithful workers, men and women, in our homes, on the farms, in the mines and factories, in all works of manufacture, construction and transportation, in shops and factories and in every field of industry.

The adoption of Labor Day should not be accepted as a recognition by the State of a separate laboring class. All who respect themselves or deserve the respect of others toil faithfully and steadfastly. The only approach to a labor class division in our country is between the workers and the drones. Let us then all join, not formally, nor passively, but earnestly and actively in a true heartfelt tribute of respect to all who toil, to do honor to the genius and common sense of American labor and its achievements in conquering the wilderness and building up that magnificent total of material, physical, mental and moral welfare and wealth which has come to bless mankind in this favored land as it never has been blessed before in any land or time, and above all let us make this a holiday and tribute of loving honor and devotion to our American women and their work in our homes, the hardest, most unselfish, unceasing and blessed work of all. Thus shall each faithful laborer do honor, not only to all fellow workers, but also to his own character and faith.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and set the great seal of the Commonwealth, this thirteenth day of August, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and nine, and in the one hundred and eighteenth year of the Commonwealth.

AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON,
Governor of Kentucky.

By the Governor,
HEN S. BRUNER,
Secretary of State.

BALD KNOB

Sept. 1.—We are needing rain very much in this community. People are very busy cutting tobacco.

Misses Olive Gordon and Irene Taylor, of Cromwell; Mrs. Trip Taylor and family, Mr. R. P. Likens and family, of Mt. Pleasant, and Mrs. G. W. Gordon, of Cromwell, visited Mr. A. E. Sandefur and family Sunday.

Several from here attended the ice cream supper at Hickory last Saturday night and reported a nice time. There will be singing at this place Saturday night. Everybody come and hear the new class sing.

Mrs. Sallie Malden and children, of —, visited her sister, Mrs. Sude Taylor, Saturday night and Sunday.

Several from here are contemplating to attend the Sunday school convention at Rosine next Sunday. Everybody come and hear the good speaking.

Mr. L. M. Sandefur and Miss Dixie Mosley, of Hartford, visited Mr. Robert Mosley and family and Mr. Marion Sandefur and family Saturday night and Sunday.

The social given at Mr. Elisha Payton's last Friday night was enjoyed by all present.

Mr. Jesse Torrence and wife and Miss Rhoda Torrence, of this place, spent Saturday night and Sunday at Mr. R. P. Leach's, of Horton.

Mr. Newton Cox and wife, of Cromwell, visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Smith, of Select, Sunday.

Mr. Charlie Smith, wife and little daughter, Marie, of Select, spent Saturday night and Sunday at Mr. J. W. Taylor's.

Miss Harriet Sandefur is on the sick list this week.

Messrs. James E. Porter, of Cromwell, and Oscar Allen, of Hartford, were the guests of Misses Ethel and Minnie Raines, of Mt. Pleasant, Sunday evening.

Several from here will attend the big show which will be at Beaver Dam next Wednesday.

Hurrah! for the lucky style on bangs this year or fall.

Sabbath school closed at Mt. Pleasant last Sunday evening.

Prayer meeting at Mt. Pleasant every Wednesday night. Come along.

HOT ROAST FOR CENTRAL CITY

Hogs, Mud, Coal Cinders and Other Abominations Abound.

Hartford, Ky., Sept. 2, 1909.

Editor Republican:—I have just returned from a visit to friends in Central City and I want to tell you some thing about that wonderful, progressive town across the river. I once thought to find fault with our own good old town of Hartford and though our people were old fashioned and wanted some of the later-day chic, if you please, and get-up-and-get the relievess, but since I've been to C. C. and C. I am satisfied to be satisfied at home.

Central City is a good town with electric lights, hid under a bushel. Green river water without a headache but plenty of mud when the river is up, lots of coal, coal-cinder, dust and—hogs, yes, and cattle.

You would think, on sighting from the train that a great agricultural fair was in progress and that all the country round had sent their hogs and cattle to the show. But it is not so. The people of the town seem to think it a good place to raise hogs and everybody goes in for hogs. There you find Poland-China, Red Chester, white Chester, razor-back, long nose, half-breeds and no breed, all sorts and sizes rooting, rooting, rooting, watching for an opening to your yard or garden, upsetting your chicken coops and filling the town with fleas big enough to take the sheet from off you at night and wade into your ear-cass with a drill and a will that make you feel like an infinitesimal part of thirty cents.

But, the cows, they are the pride of Central City. They walk the streets at all hours of day and night and it is at night that they are most in evidence, especially the tinkling bells as they graze about the front gate or ruminating on your front pavement, always leaving their cards for your inspection and dispersion in the morning.

Then again, the gentle cadencing of the noctivagant bull as he makes his nightly calls, and varying the monotony of his monotone with the dulcet strains of the trained chorister, he walks the streets and wakes the sleeper except he be a native to the manor born and accustomed to the forbidding sounds. And this is Central City. Hogs rub against your whitewashed paling, wallow in the gutter in front of your door which you must keep shut if you would insure freedom from hoggy intrusion. Just the other day a bunch of ladies were enjoying a melon in the back part of one of the largest stores in the town when, on being called to wait on a customer in the front, a town hog, or several hogs came into the back door and flushed the feast for them. Hartford is a beautiful town and if you are ever tempted to find fault with it just spend a few days in Central City and if you are not cured of your malady you are a confirmed hypocrite.

BURLEY SOCIETY IN COURT

Tobacco Buyers Resort to Bluff Measure

Will Evoke Anti-Trust Law in Effort to Buy Cheap
Tobacco

Cincinnati, August 30.—The first gun of a new "tobacco war" in Kentucky was fired to-day when Clark & Scott, independent tobacco manufacturers of Scotland, Pa., filed suit in the federal court in Covington, Ky., against the Burley Tobacco Society, Charles Lebus, the president, and ten other men as defendants.

Plaintiffs demand $135,320 damages.

The plaintiffs demand damages on the ground that they were overcharged on tobacco they were obliged to buy from the Burley Tobacco society.

The suit is filed under the Sherman anti-trust law, and the Burley society is charged with being a monopoly in restraint of trade.

Nineteen Kentucky tobacco growers and two Ohio growers are named as party defendants. The Burley society is charged with entering into a conspiracy with the growers to control the white burley tobacco market in the United States. The plaintiff alleges that in 1908 they were unable to buy white burley tobacco in the open market and were compelled to go to the Burley society for the product; that in 1906 the plaintiffs had to pay eighteen cents per pound when the tobacco was really worth only eight cents; that in 1907 the Burley society forced them to pay seventeen cents and a fraction per pound when the product was worth but eight cents.

In the petition the Burley society is described as a branch of the Society of Equity.

It is claimed by interested parties that this suit will reveal differences that resulted in "night rider" troubles.

The attorneys for the plaintiffs declare they will also ask for an injunction against the disposal of the assets of the Burley society, alleged to amount to $1,500,000.

W. D. Collins & Bros., tobacco brokers of Louisville, Ky., said to be the principal owners of the Buckeye Leaf Tobacco Warehouse of Cincinnati are connected with the proceedings against the Burley Tobacco society.

Surveyors are Busy Near Bowling Green.

Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 31.—The arrival here of a party of surveyors revives the rumors that the Tennessee Central intends building into Paducah and forming a link to the Burlington system northwest to the coast. The engineers refuse to talk other than to say that several lines will be run, one to Paducah and one via Princeton.

FAIRVIEW.

Aug. 30.—Dr. A. L. Schauenbacher and wife and little daughter, Helen, of Rosine, attended Sunday school at this place Sunday. Dr. Schauenbacher gave a nice instructive talk on Sunday school lines which was highly appreciated. Come again, Doctor, we will be glad to have you with us.

Prof. A. P. Thomas, of Providence, Ky., was the guest of his brother, Mr. J. C. Thomas, of near Olaton, a few days last week. On Friday night he addressed a large audience at Cedar Grove church near here, on the subject of music and education. Prof. Thomas is a fine speaker, and though deprived of the pleasure of hearing his address, the writer feels in a measure qualified to speak in glowing terms of it, and trust Prof. Thomas will be permitted to appear before the people of this community again.

Mrs. Amanda Crowe, of Louisville, arrived to-day to be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Acton, for a few days.

Miss Beesie, F. Acton and Mr. Frank Wright, of Horton, were the guests of Miss Acton's mother, Mrs. C. C.

White Sunday.

Mrs. A. L. Schauenbacher and little daughter, Helen, of Rosine, were the guests of Mrs. Mary Wilson Sunday night.

Mrs. Effie Boswell and little son, Arnold, happened to a very painful accident Friday. They were violently thrown from a horse rendering the child unconscious for a while, but it is not thought that it was seriously injured, while Mrs. Boswell, suffered only painful injuries to her right arm.

Mrs. Mary Wright, mention of whose illness appeared in these items last week, is improving.

Misses Myrtle Brown and Stella Croomes and little Miss Ida Faught entertained the Sunday school with some very nice recitations Sunday. Boys, visit our Sunday school, our girls can't be beaten.

Hurrah for the Republican ticket!

ARNOLD.

Aug. 31.—Health in this community is not very good. Those on the sick list are Mrs. Katharine Coy, Mr. R. A. Coy, Mr. J. H. Evans and Miss Annie Cotton.

We are needing rain very badly.

Farmers are very busy cutting tobacco. The crop will be short and of a poor quality. Some corn is being cut.

Several are preparing to attend the Red Men Pow-Wow at Brooklyn, Ky., September 4th.

SUDDEN DEATH OF LOVABLE WOMAN

Mrs. R. A. Miller Ill Only a Short Time—Grand-Daughter of Former Governor.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 31.—Mrs. Margaret L. Miller, wife of Reuben A. Miller, and one of the best known women in the state and loved by all who knew her, died suddenly at 8 o'clock Monday night at the home on East Fourth street. Mrs. Miller had not been feeling well for several days, but was able to be out and was visiting neighbors on Monday afternoon. She became ill about 7 o'clock and the children were called. Mr. Miller, who went to Louisville on Sunday, returned on the 8:40 o'clock train last night, where he was met by friends. The news of his wife's death was a severe shock to him.

Mrs. Miller was born January 22, 1858, at Hawesville, and was fifty-one years old. She was a daughter of Col. John C. Morehead of the Confederate army and was left an orphan at the age of four years. She became the "child of the regiment" which Col. Morehead commanded. She was subsequently cared for by a friend of her father, Dr. Scott, who was enabled at a later period to consign her to the protecting care of General S. B. Buckner, who adopted and reared her as his own daughter and he in return received from her the loving devotion and loyalty of an own child.

Her grandfather was Hon. James T. Morehead, a lawyer of note, who was governor of Kentucky from 1831 to 1836 and who represented Kentucky in the United States Senate from 1841 to 1847.

She was married to Reuben A. Miller, November 30, 1880, at Hawesville, where she lived until 1888, when she moved with her husband to Owensboro. Mr. and Mrs. Miller resided in Frankfort for a short time. She was a member of the Methodist church, and was devoted to her home.

Payne-Thorp.

The Citizens Daily Bulletin of Hot Springs, Ark., has the following announcement of the marriage of well known young people of Ohio county:—

"The many friends of Mr. Brodie Payne, son of Dr. J. B. Payne of this city will be pleased to learn of his marriage to Miss Mary Ethel Thorpe, daughter of one of the most prominent citizens of McHenry, Ky.

The young couple were married Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mr. John T. Christian, 1604 Spriggs street, Little Rock, Ark. After a short visit with relatives of the bride in Little Rock and of the groom in Hot Springs they will be at home to their friends in McHenry, Ky., after September 6."

NORTH POLE DISCOVERED

American Plants Stars and Stripes on Earth's Axis.

Dr. Fredric A. Cook of Brooklyn is the Name of the Lucky Man.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The Paris edition of the New York Herald this morning publishes a signed statement from Dr. Frederick A. Cook, which is dated "Hans Egede, Loerwick, Wednesday," on his experiences in the Arctic regions.

"After a prolonged fight with famine and frost," says Dr. Cook, "we have at last succeeded in reaching the North Pole. A new highway, with an interesting strip of animated nature, has been explored, and big game haunts located which will delight sportsmen and extend the Eskimo horizon.

Brussels, Sept. 1.—The observatory here received the following telegram dated Loerwick, Shetland Islands: "Reached North Pole April 21, 1908. Discovered land far north. Return to Copenhagen by steamer Hans Egede. (Signed)

"FREDERICK COOK."

The American officials at the observatory state the dispatch is surely authentic, and that the North Pole has been reached for the first time and by an American.

Here All the Time.

Jas. H. Parrish, who is passing a hot summer here or less pleasantly in the Hawesville jail while he awaits the tardy action of the appellate court has not lost his sense of humor on account of confinement. Not many days since he was called to the long distance telephone and a friend inquired of the ex-banker when he could see him in Hawesville. Quick as a flash came the answer: "Oh, most any old time, I am always here." Hancock, Clarion.

The second race in the series between German and American boats to Taft and Draper cups was won by the Ellen, owned and sailed by Chas. P. Curtis, Jr., of the Boston Yacht Club.

An earthquake was experienced in Panama shortly after 8 o'clock Monday morning. The people were greatly alarmed, but no serious damage has been reported and no one was injured.

Bird S. Coler, president of the Borough of Brooklyn, has filed charges against Mayor McClellan with Gov. Hughes, charging that the city's money has been squandered in investigating the Mayor's political enemies.

Eight cruisers comprising the Pacific fleet under command of Rear Admiral Uriel Sebree, arrived at San Francisco from Seattle and at once began final preparations for a cruise in Oriental waters that will continue until February 15.

Ohio County High School.

The Ohio County High School opened Monday morning with a large attendance of students and patrons of the school, the chapel being filled to overflowing. Prayer was offered by Rev. Bruner after which an appropriate talk was given by Rev. Elgin. Prof. Bailey then made some opening remarks and the various grades filed out to their rooms headed by their teachers to begin the year's work. Judge J. S. Glenn, W. S. Tinsley and C. M. Barnett, members of the Hartford School Board were present. The school opens with bright prospects for a satisfactory year's work.

The following students from a distance have been enrolled so far: Augusta and Cyrus Patin, of Louisiana, Misses Maggie and Rhoda Williams and Mr. Levi Coleman, Paradise, Ky., Miss Elizabeth Berryman, South Hartford, Mr. Carroll Smith Melleny, Mr. John Carter, Shinnons, Miss Lella Magan, Buford, Messrs. Cecil and Edgar Barnard and Richard Ward, North Hartford, Gilbert Bell, Pleasant Ridge, The High School enrollment was 52.

CROMWELL.

Aug. 31.—Mr. Lawrence Gary, who is very ill of typhoid fever, is improving slowly.

On Wednesday of last week the Rev. H. Boyce Taylor, of Murray, Ky., together with his mother and brother, W. C. Taylor, paid a visit to Mr. S. L. Stevens, and on Wednesday night preached a very interesting sermon at No. 25 school house.

Messrs. E. W. Jackson and C. S. Taylor attended the district union held in the fifth Magdalen district at Flat-Foot church in Butler county, on the 28. They say it was one of the largest gatherings that ever attended a district union of the A. S. of E. in that county. The regular order of business was suspended for Taylor to speak in the morning, which speech was well received and appreciated by the large audience in attendance. In the afternoon Mr. Jackson spoke to a well filled house which was also well received by all who heard it. All seemed sorry that the hour of parting was drawing so near but finally the gavel of president Elmer Stewart fell and the district meeting was a thing of the past.

A birthday supper was given Miss Tassie Taylor at her home, Sunday evening in honor of her sixteenth were, Miss Gertrude Stevens and Messrs. Fred Porter and George Leach.

On the 25th day of August there was born to the wife of Mr. Allison James, a fine girl.

EX-GOV. TAYLOR PASSES THROUGH STATE

Which Gives Rise to the Report That He is Visiting His Old Home.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 30.—William S. Taylor, formerly of Kentucky, was laughing to-day about dispatches from Kentucky to the effect that he was revisiting that State for the first time since he had left it to make his home in Indiana and that he was contemplating a visit to his old home county, Butler.

"The fact is that I have not been visiting in Kentucky at all," said Mr. Taylor.

"On August 21 I left Indianapolis for Helena, Ark., and I went through Kentucky to get there. However, it was night when I went through on the train and I stopped in Louisville long enough to change cars. I don't remember of having discussed my trip with anyone in Kentucky, and I never gave out any interviews while passing through the State. I suppose the way the report got out that I was visiting in Kentucky was through an Indianapolis man, whom I met on the train going to Louisville. On my return trip to Indianapolis, I came through Kentucky, but again I tarried only long enough to change cars at Louisville. I arrived in Indianapolis on August 27 and left immediately for the northern part of this State.

"It was while in the northern part of Indiana that I read dispatches that I was visiting my home county in Kentucky. W. T. Durbin, former Governor of Indiana, whom I saw at Anderson, was surprised to see me, and laughingly asked 'if I flew back.'"

One of the dispatches from Lexington stated that Mr. Taylor was going to Lexington, where a big reception was being planned for him. Mr. Taylor came to Indianapolis nine years ago when he fled from Kentucky, after he had been charged with complicity in the killing of Gov. Goebel.

AN OLD TIME ELECTION

How Three Days Election of 1830 was Conducted

Runners With Whiskey Bottles Sticking out of Their Pockets Bribed Voters.

"I have just witnessed a strange thing—a Kentucky election—and am disposed to give an account of it. An election in Kentucky lasted three days, and during that period whiskey, apple toddy flow through our cities and villages like Euphrates through ancient Babylon. I must do Lexington the justice to say that matters were conducted here with tolerable propriety, but in Frankfort, a place I had the curiosity to visit on the last day of the election, Jacksonism and drunkenness stalked triumphant, an unclean pair of lumbering giants. A number of runners, each with a whiskey bottle sticking its long neck from his pocket, were busily employed bribing voters, and each party kept half a dozen bullocks under pay, genuine specimens of Kentucky alligatorism, to flow every now and then over the fence to break the chains of the skulls that were broken on that occasion I barely escaped myself. One of the runners came up to me, stepping me on the shoulder with his right hand, and a whiskey bottle in his left hand, he asked me if I was a voter. 'No,' said I, 'Ah, never mind,' quoth he, 'follow me, pulling a corn-cob out of the back of the bottle and shaking it up to the best advantage, 'less have a swig in the corner and toss in a vote for old Hickory's boys—I'll fight for ye, damn it.' He was a temptation to be sure, but after looking alternately at the bottle and bullock who were standing ready with their sledge-hammer fists to knock down every interloper, my fears prevailed and I lost my whiskey.

"Shortly after this I witnessed a fight. A great ruffian-looking scoundrel, with arms like a pair of cables, knotted at the ends, and a round, black head that looked like a fat round cannon shot, swaggered up to the polls and threw in his dirt of paper and was walking off in triumph. Stop friend," exclaimed one of the Salt River Roasters, stepping up to him, 'are you a voter?' 'Yes, yes,' replied he of the bullet head. 'That's all,' rejoined the Roaster, 'and you must just prepare yourself to be home, old man, for I'll be damned if I don't kick you into the middle of your ninety-ninth year.' 'Ay, ay,' replied the other, 'come on, then; I'll ride you to hell, whipped up with the sea serpent. They had now reached an open place and the salt river bully shaking his fist a moment by way of a hint, dropped his chin suddenly upon his bosom and pitched head foremost toward the stomach of his gigantic frame. Bullet Head, however, was on his guard, and dodging aside with the quickness of lightning to avoid the shock, gave the assailant a blow that sent him staggering against a whiskey table, where he fell to the mugs and tumblers. Nothing daunted the bully gathered himself up, and with a single muttered curse, renewed his place in front of his foe. Several blows were now given on both sides with tremendous effect, and in a few moments the salt river boy repeated the maneuver in which he had first been foiled. This time he was successful. His head was planted directly in his antagonist's stomach, who fell backward with such force that I had no expectation of his rising again. 'Is the scoundrel done for?' inquired the temporary victor, walking up and looking down on his prostrate foe. Bullet spoke not, but with the bound of a wild cat leaped to his feet and grappled with his enemy. It was a trial of strength, and the combatants fought at length the strength of Bullet Head prevailed, and his opponent lay struggling beneath him. 'Gorge voters meaning thereby to gorge his him?' Gorge him! exclaimed a dozen voices, meaning thereby to gorge his eyes out. The topmost combatant seized his hair and was preparing to follow the advice shouted in his ear, when the prostrate man, aroused to sudden desperation and exclaiming a strength that seemed superhuman, caught his assailant by the throat with a grasp like that of fate. For a few moments the struggle ceased, and the face of the throttled man turned black, his tongue fell out of his mouth, and he rolled to the ground as senseless as a dead man. I turned, away a com-firmed believer in the doctrine of total depravity.

ON GOD'S GREEN EARTH NEVER AGAIN

Did This Man's Footfall, After Lincoln's Election, Fifty Years Ago.

Springfield, Ky., Aug. 31.—Basil Hayden, a wealthy farmer and one of the most unique characters in the state, in that he had voluntarily for fifty years kept indoors, refraining from leaving his room, died of a complication of diseases due to the infirmities of age at his home just over the Nelson County line. He was born in the house in which he died. His parents came from Maryland in the early part of the Nineteenth century and were among the early settlers of Nelson county. Basil Hayden was one of twelve children. He was educated at St. Joseph's College, Bardonia, when his father was at his zenith. He was very much opposed to the election of Abraham Lincoln as President of the United States, and when the result of the election was made known to him he went into his room and remained there from that time until his death. During that period of more than half a century he seldom saw any one. The house in which he lived was a brick structure, built in the early colonial style, situated on his farm of 600 acres, far from the road, the way to which lies through a dense forest.

He was very peculiar in his habits and during the hottest days of the year he kept a wood fire burning in the great fireplace in his room, though separated from the world and scarcely living in it he was well informed on all the leading questions of the day and conversed intelligently on all subjects with the few who had the privilege of being admitted to his presence. For more than fifty years his health was good, yet during that time he never saw beyond the view to be obtained from his window or set foot on the ground. He was a successful farmer and raised bountiful crops and much fine stock, especially mules. During the season at stated times he would have the manager of his farm bring all the live stock on the farm and pass it in review before his window. Then he would order such of it as he saw proper sold and direct what was to be done with the remainder. He was never married and it is not yet known what disposition he made of his fortune, which is large.

DISTRICT UNION EQUITY CALL

Burley Growers Will Be Organized at Elizabethtown.

Quick Action is Wanted on the 1909 Pool in Fourteen Counties.

President E. L. Davenport of the National Tobacco Growers' association, a branch of the American Society of Equity, has called a meeting of the tobacco growers of the Burley district and the counties of Meade, Hardin, Larue, Hart, Barren, Metcalf, Green, Adair, Taylor, Marion, Washington, Nelson, Spencer and Bullitt at Elizabethtown September 4.

The call is as follows: At the national meeting of the American Society of Equity department of tobacco, held at Bowling Green, Ky., August 19, 1909, a reorganization of this department was harmoniously effected by electing the proper officers and a board of directors and adopting a pooling pledge to be used by the Burley growers of Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana for the year 1909.

Realizing the importance of prompt and quick action on the part of the Burley growers of Kentucky to pool the 1909 crop, I hereby call a meeting of delegates from the following named counties and all other counties of the Burley district in Kentucky that wish to affiliate with this department to meet at Elizabethtown on Saturday, September 4, for the purpose of organizing a district union of the Burley tobacco growers of Kentucky. The hosts of representation will be one delegate from each county having one or more local unions of the American Society of Equity and one delegate from each local union. All delegates to this meeting must be members of the American Society of Equity in the following named counties: will get busy at once and have delegates attend this meeting—Meade, Hardin, Larue, Hart, Barren, Metcalf, Green, Adair, Taylor, Marion, Washington, Nelson, Spencer and Bullitt. E. L. DAVENPORT, President National Tobacco Growers' association.

Evading the Tariff by Mail.

The actual schedule of rates is very important in the Tariff, but greater stress than is generally attached should be laid upon the administrative features, which until lately have not been appreciated by the industrialists. Even during the present hearing few producers were prepared to tell how the enforcement of the law was evaded, and although it had been apparent that undervaluing or some method that permitted illegal entry of goods was in force, there was little said about how such practice obtained. A serious fraud was brought out in the silk industry, or more properly in an allied industry. In the illegal importation of design cards for the Jacquard process. These cards are the work of high class artists, as they are designs that are followed in manufacturing high grade silks. To produce them in this country is very expensive because of the high wages paid to this class of artisans, as an initial cost, and the added expense of reproducing the designs for practical use. In Germany the reproducing is done by boys and cheap labor, while here it is only possible to employ regularly experienced men. The duty upon this class of goods is sufficient to equalize the difference in cost of producing between here and Germany. If it could be collected, it is estimated, however, that out of importations amounting to about $500,000 only 10 per cent. has paid duty, the rest being smuggled through the mails. It is possible to mail these designs without question in large numbers by first-class mail, and from the cheapest to the most expensive grades these cards come into the country without hindrance.

Here is a question of administration, not rates, and its proper enforcement will foster or ruin this industry, which started here under the McKinley law and has developed to a point where it competes with the old-foreign business. Under the McKinley law this method of mailing was made impossible because it was necessary to declare the contents of packages before mailing and the evasions were few; but since then the custom has grown to the alarming extent of being the means of nullifying the rate that is placed upon these articles to protect the domestic.

Shall Roosters be Silenced.

Out of a nameless somewhere comes a nameless somebody with a scheme which graphically illustrates man's hankering to amend the plans of creation. Being out of tune with nature, he would make the animal kingdom a voiceless realm, and condemn its denizens to a life of silence. This person has been roused to action by a crowing rooster. Wherefore he proposes that all roosters shall be made mute.

How? Simply by catechizing them while chicks and puncturing their ear drums. Then, being unable to hear sounds, they will be unable to crow any. Consider then, the voiceless rooster, haughty as ever, with comb as ruddy and strut as domineering as of yore, but utterly dumb, robbed of the faculty wherewith he was wont in halcyon days to proclaim his lordship of the baronyard. The imagination can picture no creature more grotesque nor one whose vocal bankruptcy so sharply recalls the deep-throated, defiant scream of his ancestors. A feathered nothing—a monarch stripped of the most precious attribute of his sovereignty—the voiceless rooster would play his brief pantomimic part, pitied by man and scoffed at by every self-respecting hen.

But unless the world has gone mad, the crowing rooster shall yet abide with us. His voice has a place in the economy of nature which is as distinct as his claws. He is the watchman and sentinel of the flock, as well as its ruler and guide. Voiceless, he would be of little use in any of those capacities. Heard in the country at daybreak, his crow is a call to the active duties of life—imperative, perhaps, but cheerful, self-reliant and typical of the born optimist that he is. Heard in the city, where he is too often held prisoner in unworthy environment, his note is one of defiance to his captor, proclaiming the undaunted warrior preferring death to surrender.

Broadly speaking, it may be said that the man who is annoyed by the crowing of a rooster deserves to be annoyed. He is a discord in the coordinated harmonies of humanity and nature—dyspeptic, maybe, or grouchy—and if by the foot race to which the chancier challenges him he is helped to get into tune with the world about him he may thank the feathered disturber of his repose for the gain.—From the New York Mail.

WALKING WITH A WIDDER-MAN

It Means Marrying Him Prompt, Especially if He's Got a Home.

"No, m'm, it were not too salt, m'm," said Matilda firmly; and then, while I still gazed astonished, she sat down and burst into noisy, childish weeping.

As she seemed to be apologizing and saying she "couldn't think what made her act so silly," I told her I would overlook it.

"It's my sister, m'm, is going to marry such a beast of a man," she explained. "Nothing else would have made me fly out so unbecomingly." She resumed her tears with an energy which seemed to demand sympathy, sympathy or summary dismissal.

"Not that she could have looked for a high marriage, being so inoffensive and with hair as strile as a pound of candles," Matilda went on. "But him being in a show, it's beyond!"
"A vap, m'm—a traveling show," she explained. "She walked out with him Sunday week, and never wrote word to me, though I was let know by many kind friends as despised her for it, let alone others that congratulated me like snakes in the grass. And yesterday she done it again—walked down Meeting lane on Sunday afternoon, and ain't ashamed to own it."

To the outsider, the case seemed far from desperate. Did not Harriet walk out for eleven years with a middle-aged butcher boy, and announce her consent to marry him at the end of it as a hair-raising surprise? "Perhaps she will change her mind and give him up," I suggested. Cook dried her eyes and rose, obviously ashamed of having exhibited her woes to one without understanding.

"He's a widder-man, m'm," she said reproachfully. "You can't walk out with a widder-man without marrying him prompt. He's got a house."

"But you said it was a van," I objected. She smothered her apron and carefully broke an egg into a cup.

"It's the same to marry into, though not similar to live in," she said. "If I was to speak to him like she knows I can (and draw tears at the first word is what I'm accustomed to in the home) she'd give him up. But I couldn't have it said as a sister of mine had held out hopestoman with a house and family and then drew back. Her and me have got to bear it. This ain't a world that'll let you look back. ALLOYED GOLD INLAYS

Now Being Used by Dentist
In Filling Teeth.

Delicate Work Required To Plug up Cavities in the Human Molars.

The modern dentist now makes gold inlays as well as inlays of porcelain.

In making an ordinary gold filling the cavity in the tooth is made larger within than at its opening, the walls thus contracting helping to hold the filling in. The cavity for a gold inlay must of course be at least as large at the opening as at any interior point, for the inlay is in a solid block.

There may be various reasons for putting into a tooth a gold inlay instead of filling malleable in. For one reason it may be that the walls of the tooth are too frail to stand the mallet-ing without danger of breaking, or it may be that the gold inlay is to go into a back, grinding tooth, where a malleable filling would not serve the purpose. An ordinary gold filling such as is malleable in is made of pure gold; if it were otherwise it could not be worked; a gold inlay can be alloyed to make it of a degree of hardness sufficient to withstand use.

Porcelain inlays are commonly set in front teeth, where they do not show as a gold filling would. The porcelain powders of which such inlays are made are produced in a practically endless variety of shades, which can be further varied by combination.

It is possible to make a porcelain inlay that will match the surrounding tooth so perfectly that except upon the closest inspection it is impossible to tell where the tooth leaves off and the inlay begins. Porcelain inlays, which are moulded into shape from the plastic material and then baked, may be set in grinding teeth, but this is not commonly done. A porcelain inlay that might not break if stepped on might break in a grinding tooth in use.

A perfect amalgam filling will wear as well and as long as the tooth in which it is set, but amalgam discolors in time, and there are persons who will not have an amalgam filling even in a back tooth, out of sight. For these people for a grinding tooth gold inlays are made.

In whatever sort of tooth the gold inlay is to be placed, the cavity when drilled out is furrowed down its sides within with little grooves, into which corresponding mouldings on the inlay will fit, this to hold the inlay more securely in place and the better to enable it to withstand pressure applied to it from various directions, and with the cavity finished a form or pattern is taken of it in wax. Into one end of this little form or pattern in wax is thrust a delicate wire, by which it can be handled without handling the form itself, and then this pattern is set in a tiny flask, and around it, as in a foundry the moulders pack sand around patterns in making moulds in bigger flasks, plaster is packed.

When this tiny mould containing the wax pattern for the inlay has hardened the wire is drawn out of the pattern and the wax is melted out of the mould, and then there is the mould ready for the casting, which is done by the aid of various special appliances made for the purpose. Then you break the little plaster mould and there, release, you have the gold in-lay.

It is set into place with cement, which after an hour or two in which to harden holds the inlay firmly and securely anchored. In due time later the dentist will grind it down around to make it perfectly flush with the surrounding tooth surface and polish it.—New York Sun.

PARDON-SEEKERS TURNED DOWN.

Gov. Cox Finds He is Imposed Upon.

No Clemency Where Gov. Willson
Has Refused to Grant
Pardons.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 29.—Pardon seekers received a rude check during the last week while Lieut. Gov. Cox was acting as Chief Executive of the State for the Acting Governor laid down the law to several persons who applied to him for pardons after having been refused clemency by Gov.
Willson. Gov. Cox says he will not stand for this and where Gov. Willson has refused to grant a pardon the Acting Governor will refuse to consider an application.

It has been customary, and has been done frequently, for the friends of a convict or a man in trouble to apply to Gov. Willson for a pardon. If refused application then would be made to Gov. Cox, it being thought that they would have a new chance with a new man. But Gov. Cox has caught onto the scheme, and while he was in Frankfort on this trip he adopted the rule that where a pardon has been refused by the Governor that ends the case as far as chances for a pardon are concerned during this administration. Gov. Cox says it would not be right or proper for him to grant a pardon after the Governor of the State had refused to grant a pardon, even though, after hearing the facts, he should think that the Governor had made a mistake.

It came this way. Application for pardon was made to Gov. Cox and he said he would consider the case and look into the facts. He took down the papers and the records in the case and much to his surprise found that application had been made previously to Gov. Willson and the Governor had declined to grant a pardon. That settled it with Gov. Cox. He refused to grant the pardon and has served notice that in the future the action of Gov. Willson will be final unless Governor Willson himself sees fit to change his mind.

When Gov. Willson does not grant a pardon it does not mean the decision is final. In some cases he lays away the papers with a view to studying them further or looking more closely into the facts or to let time pass before acting, but in many cases he does act and writes refused, across the envelope in which the papers are contained. That ends the case and it is cases of this kind that Gov. Cox will refuse to consider in the future. The truth of the matter is that Gov. Cox has been imposed upon considerably since he has been acting as Governor, and he is tired of
it. Like all Governors or Acting Governors his heart has become considerably hardened by too many appeals.

The Oldest Living Triplets.

According to Congressman Charles H. Cowles, of North Carolina, the oldest living triplets in the world are the Gibbs, born in Wilkesboro, N. C., May 2, 1833, and now in their seventy-seventh year. One of the triplets, William Washington Gibbs, resides in Atlanta, Ga., and the other two, Robert Jackson Gibbs and Thomas Lafayette Gibbs, live at Boomer, N. C., within a few miles of the place of their birth. The three brothers are hale, hearty, industrious, sober and splendid citizens, in spite of the fact that they endured the hardships and privations of four years of Civil War and years of struggle with poverty.
All three of them volunteered early in the war, and fought in the same company of the same regiment in many battles. Bethel was the first real battle of the war between the States.

of that struggle. The Gibbs triplets, in common with all North Carolinians are proud of the inscription on the State's battlefield monuments, which reads: "First at Bethel, farthest at Gettysburg, and last at Appomattox."
The triplets are descended from longlived families on both sides. Their father lived to be a good old age and their mother died only a few years ago at the age of almost ninety-one. "Aunt Carolina" Grinton (col-

Mr. Bryan will find that Texas is just as far from Washington as Nebraska.

If politics is to be eliminated from the census, why not eliminate it from Congress as well?

It is said that Mr. Harriman is now able to sit up and take a railroad or two for luncheon.

"What is a baby worth?" asks the Philadelphia American. It depends somewhat on whose baby it is.

Some people contend that there is going to be world wide peace, if it takes a bloody war to bring it about.

Senator Cummins, of Iowa, is still in session on the tariff question. The Senate having adjourned he should adjourn also.

President Taft will visit more places, meet more people, and travel more miles in his coming tour than any other president has ever done.

The Bradley banquet at Louisville last week thoroughly demonstrated the fact that the Republicans of Kentucky are working in absolute harmony.

We see no reason for the opposition to Secretary McVay's reported plan of reducing the size of paper currency. If the bills are small we can make believe that we have plenty of money.

Walter Wellman has again failed in his effort to reach the North Pole. But there is one thing concerning which he is to be congratulated. He always furnishes his own relief expedition.

The ink had scarcely gotten dry on the new tariff bill until the leather trust was formed. This is a "skin game" to take up the profits made possible by free hides. The farmer pays the bill.

The Democrats never have much trouble in splitting the Republican party. The trouble has always been to keep it split on election day.

It seems that a few screws are to be left loose in the Alabama prohibition law.

The leather men say that the removal of the tariff on hides will not affect the farmer. That is, it will not make hides cheaper. But if the removal of the duty will not make hides cheaper, what then is the use in taking it off? Somebody is lying and somebody is playing a bunco game on the farmers, as usual. The tariff "reform" is to be taken out of the producer on the farm.

Our Democratic friends undertake to claim credit for the repeal of the tobacco tax and yet the only four votes from Kentucky cast for the passage of the measure which made it possible were given by Republicans. Nine Democratic votes from Kentucky were cast against the measure and had there been enough of this kind of votes in Congress, the tobacco tax would today be unrepented.

Every member of the Republican ticket is out seeing the voters and the indications are that the full Republican vote will be brought to the polls in November. The party is absolutely harmonious and there is no doubt about the election of every one on the ticket. However, the boys are taking no chances and are hustling for votes as though they had serious opposition. We believe now that the majority for some of the candidates will reach 800. Mark this prediction and see if we are not right.

In relinquishing the control of the Breckenridge County Democrat, the Moormans, to whom the paper has been longed and who have been its editors, took occasion to notify their enemies in the Democratic camp that they might expect no quarter from them in the future. They say that some of them have already been punished and that others will receive the same treatment whenever they furnish an opportunity. All of this should be very encouraging to the Republicans of Breckenridge county, who have nominated an elegant ticket and deserve to win. We see no reason why they would allow victory to be wrenched from them when they have the majority of the votes in the county.

The Breckenridge County Democrat has been purchased by leading Republicans of Breckenridge county and will be issued this week as a Republican organ, under the management of a stock company. It is probable that Hon. John P. Haswell will be its editor, at least for a time. This is the best move which the Breckenridge county Republicans have ever made and if the paper is maintained it will place Breckenridge county permanently in the Republican column. The county has been Republican for a number of years, having always given its vote to that party in state and national elections, but has usually fallen down in county races, for the reason that they had no county organ to represent them and no medium through which to refute unfounded charges coming from Democratic newspapers. We take off our hat to the Republicans of Breckenridge county and congratulate them that they have at last hit upon the only plan through which the county ticket can be carried to success. This fall and permanent party supremacy be maintained. We wish the new organ abundant success and we shall always be glad to extend it a helping hand, for we feel now, since we are connected with the new railroad that Harbansburg and Hartford are neighbors.

PALO.

Sept. 1.—Health is not very good in our community at present. Those on the sick list are J. T. Hines, an infant of Mr. Bob Dever, Mrs. Ina Durbin and children and Mrs. Ella Bunker. Chills seem to be the prevailing trouble.

Mrs. Mary Nelson and children, of Illinois, and Mr. J. T. Hines, wife and children, of Palo, visited Mr. B. M. Coy and family at Jingo, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Emma and son, Master Lewis, visited Mrs. Nannie Hines Tuesday evening.

Mr. Hud Durbin, who has been visiting relatives here, returned to his home in New Albany Sunday.

Misses Gertrude and Belda King were the guests of Miss Rosa Russell Sunday.

Messlames, Fannie Coy and Nola Coy visited Mrs. Lula Powers at Sunday, Sunday.

Mr. Charlie Colburn was very badly stung by yellow jackets recently while trimming a tree and was quite sick for sometime from his warm experience.

Mrs. Nannie Hines visited Mrs. Effie Duke Monday evening.

Louisville Horse Show.

The prize-list for the Louisville Horse Show, the tenth annual exhibition of which will be given at the First Regiment Armory in the metropolis of the State during the week of October 11, has been completed, and indicates that the horse-men of this State and the country at large will have a rich array of money and plate to contest for. The total amount will run well over $12,000, and insures competition by the finest horseflesh in the country.

Kentucky saddlers, as usual, have a large place on the program, as they have always had. The three-gaited and five-gaited saddle horses, for which this commonwealth is as famous as for its thoroughbreds, have been divided into classes such as naturally suggest themselves to the horseman, and age, size and ability to do will be considered in making awards. Mat Cohen, the Ball Brothers, the Gay stable, Lawrence Jones and other noted owners of saddle horses will have entries this year.

In the harness classes the Louisville show will be, as usual, almost unequalled. Last year the entries of this division were the exhibitions of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Judge William H. Moore, and it is practically certain that both will be back this fall. In addition C. W. Watson, Miss Emily Bedford, Reginald Vanderbilt and J. W. Harriman are expected to show. Altogether, the prospects for the show are unusually brilliant.

Sept. 1.—Farmers in our community are very busy with their tobacco.

Mr. J. H. Ambrose returned home from Louisville, Saturday.

Little Bertie Ambrose happened to a painful accident last Monday at school. While playing he ran over a little girl, fell and broke his foot. A horse and buggy was sent for and his brother, Scott, who has charge of the school took him to Pleasant Ridge where Dr. Shultz set the broken bone and he is now getting along nicely.

The young people of this community should take warning as the big leopard is running at large again. Mr. Owen Wells says that he saw its track on last Sunday in the big road near Miss Eva Martin's. He says that its track was something about the size of a coon skin.

The invincibility of Pleasant Ridge ball team and their boast of skill and how they were going to show the Adaburg boys the way the chicken got the ax was somewhat spoiled as the ax was placed at the neck of the other fellows.

Messrs. Owen Ambrose and Owen Wells attended a party at Mrs. Allen's on last Tuesday night.

Our new trustee, Mr. Butler Rhoads, has ordered an automobile from Louisville and says that he intends to see every part of the district and see that the children are provided for in the proper manner this time.

The medicine man passed through our town Tuesday.

Mr. Frank Taylor, of Adaburg, who has been in the jungles of the wild west, has returned to his home.

Steak Meals so good at the City Restaurant.

Mr. J. C. Riley was in Dundee Tuesday on business.

City Restaurant meals so good. Come and try one.

Have you cut your weeds? If not, do not delay another day.

Rev. L. W. Tichenor, Matanzas, paid us a pleasant call yesterday.

Mrs. C. E. Smith is quite sick at her home on Fredrick street.

Here's a treat for you—Ohio County Fair September 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Miss Ella Hooker, Browns Valley, Ky., is the guest of Miss Laura McKinney, north Hartford.

Concerts each day by 3rd Regiment Band, alone with the price of admission, at Ohio County Fair.

The Fairs of all Fairs, Hartford, September 8, 9, 10 and 11—next week. The ideal rest cure. Take it now.

Mr. George Smith, who is a student of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, is the guest of his parents.

Mr. Henry Fields, who has been visiting his family here for several days returned to Jennings, La., last Sunday.

Amusement and instruction happily joined. You will miss it if you miss it. Everything to see at Ohio County Fair.

The noted Third Regiment band Owensboro, of 20 people will furnish the music. Splendid music every day at Hartford Fair.

Messrs. Hooker Williams and G. B. Likens attended the Democratic Railroad Commissioners Convention in Owensboro, Wednesday.

Mr. Guy Ferrester, of the Republican typographical force is visiting his brother, Taylor Bartley, at Rockport, Ind.

Special free attractions have been procured at great expense for the amusement and edification of all who attend the Ohio County Fair.

Miss Bessie Morton, whose serious illness was mentioned in these columns last week, is still in a precarious condition but little if any improved.

If you want something new for the great Ohio County Fair, visit us. We are just opening up a nice lot of Gingham, Suitings and Woollens.

CARSON & CO.

If some power could be put into action which would cause the removal of the weeds from the courthouse yard and walks, visitors to the fair would doubtless form a better opinion of the town.

The Baptist Church folks have arranged so that those who are unable but wish to hear the Sunday sermon can do so by telephone. Desk receivers will be stationed in front of the preacher and the party at the other end of the line simply sits back and listens. It is a commendable, up-to-date enterprise.

A series of meetings will be held at Taylor Mines, beginning Monday night, September 13. The use of the large new school building has been kindly granted us in which to hold the meeting. Christians of all denominations are cordially invited to co-operate in the meeting and feel free and at home. Rev. W. T. Gordon, district evangelist will assist.

VIRGIL ELGIN.

Mr. J. C. Jones, who keeps a soft drink establishment on Union Street, shot at a burglar last Saturday night, who was attempting to gain admittance to his place of business through a window. On several occasions, Mr. Jones had discovered that his house had been broken into and decided to lay in wait for the intruder. The would-be-burglar was probably not hurt but badly frightened.

Those who attended the Breckenridge County Fair at Hardinsburg, Wednesday, from Hartford were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Thomas and son, Elijah, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Birkhead, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. King, Mr. and Mrs. Z. W. Griffin, Mr. J. W. Ford and Miss Winnie Simmerman, Mrs. Hooker Williams, Mrs. C. M. Barnett, Mr. Sherman Park and Mrs. John B. Foster, Messrs. R. D. Walker, C. M. Crowe, E. T. Williams, Harold Holbrook, Mrs. Jennie T. Mc Henry, Mrs. R. Holbrook and daughter, Marlam. They all report a very pleasant day and an attractive fair program in our neighboring city.

Mr. C. L. Fields, Owensboro, visited relatives here a few days this week.

Mrs. Amanda Barnett, near town, has been quite sick the past few days.

Mrs. George W. Feagan and Miss Lettie Marks have returned from Dawson Springs.

CROSS-TIES WANTED—For prices, etc., call on or address O. T. O'Bannon, Hartford, Ky. 7114

Rev. Cundiff, of Hardin County will preach at the C. P. Church Saturday and Sunday nights.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Lounstetter, of Chicago, and Miss Alice Bell Allen, Hawesville, are the guests of Judge and Mrs. J. B. Wilson on Union street.

Princely prizes and purses—$1,200 alone to speed rings—a varied program embracing all kinds of racing. Attraction exhibits to please all kinds of people at Hartford Fair.

Mrs. Lizzie Young, who has been visiting the family of Mr. F. W. Pirtle, east Hartford, and other friends and relatives, returned to her home in Batten Rouge, La., Wednesday.

Born to the wife of James Nance Wednesday morning a fine boy. Mr. Nance is an employee of the Hartford Herald, but we understand the new boy has announced himself a Republican.

Mr. William Kling and family, who have been the guests of Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Pendleton for some time left on the early train wed. morning for Louisville, where they will make their future home.

Mr. F. L. Sanderfur has exchanged his house and lot on Griffin Avenue for the storehouse and stock belonging to Rev. F. D. Baughn at Sunnydale and will shortly move to that place. Rev. Baughn moving here.

Rev. W. H. Wright, of the Christian Church, preached at Beaver Dam last Sunday morning and at Hartford on the night of the same day. Rev. Wright is an eloquent and able preacher and he never fails to have an attentive audience at each service. He was formerly the pastor of the Christian Church here, and his return is always looked forward to with much pleasure.

The entertainment given at the home of Mr. Sydney Williams on Center street last Friday from 8 to 11 o'clock p. m. was highly enjoyed. Among those present were: Cove Anderson, of Owensboro; Fannie Whittinghill, Fordsville; Minnie K. TIME OF THE NATION.

How It Is Kept at the Naval Observatory in Washington.

THE SIGNAL FOR HIGH NOON.

Is Flashed Out Over Nearly a Million Miles of Telegraph Wires Every Day in the Year—The Finely Adjusted Instruments That Are Used.

A few minutes before 12 o'clock noon every day in the year a young man walks into a certain room of the main building at the naval observatory, which is set up on a hill in the northwestern part of the District of Columbia. He glances at the various clocks in the room and then goes over to a table which is covered with electric apparatus.

He watches the clocks to his left closely and waits for the hands to reach 11:55. As the second hand approaches the 60 on the dial he prepares to shift a switch. The clock is so finely adjusted that when the second hand points to 60 it exactly marks the beginning of a new minute.

As it touches the 60 the switches are thrown on. That starts a signal that goes out instantaneously over 100,000 miles of telegraph lines. In Washington, New York, Buffalo, Cleveland, Newport, Baltimore, Newport News, Norfolk, Savannah, New Orleans, Key West, Galveston, Chicago and elsewhere the time balls go up on their poles. People know that it is five minutes to noon, Washington time.

The clock which keeps the time in the observatory ticks on. With each tick there is a contact of electric points. A circuit is closed, and an instrument on the table starts to tick away loudly.

It goes on to the twenty-ninth second, then skips one tick, then resumes its steady sounding until the last five seconds; then there is another gap. These gaps are for the purpose of giving listeners at the other ends of the great system of wires a chance to know what part of the minute the clock is on. So it goes up to the last minute.

At the twenty-ninth second there is again the skipping of one second. Finally the clock gets around to the fiftieth second. Then the circuit remains open for ten seconds. There is silence all along the telegraph wires.

At the other end, where there are time balls or merely train operators, the long pause indicates that noon is almost there. The second hand makes out toward 60 and finally reaches the mark. Then there is another click; in about a second the sounder is down, and that tells hundreds of thousands of people that it is noon in Washington.

It is a wonderful operation, this getting the time, and highly technical. Finely adjusted clocks, chronographs and other instruments of great value are used, and the taking and recording of the time have reached a point where the human equation is practically eliminated.

The results obtained are of great value, particularly to mariners. The time is not only flashed to hundreds of points in the United States, but it is sent far out to sea by wireless. A cable carries the flash to Havana; another to Panama and Callao, Peru.

The observatory here does not send the time much farther west than the Rockies, but they have an observatory at the Mare Island navy yard, and from there the time is sent up and down the Pacific coast, just as it is from here to the eastern part of the United States. In the cities where the central time is used the flash marks 11 o'clock. An hour later local operators drop the time balls.

The mean time is determined by astronomical observations. When certain stars pass the seventy-fifth meridian, called the meridian of Washington, it is a certain time. The operator watches for the stars through a telescope, the field of which is covered with fine wires.

As the stars reach a certain point in transit the operator presses a key in his hand. A contact is made and recorded on a chronograph. The chronograph consists of a cylinder covered with paper. A fountain pen rests on the paper. It is held by an arm attached to the mechanism. The cylinder revolves once a minute, and the pen moves along the surface of the paper, making a spiral line.

A sidereal clock of the finest make is running in a vault underneath the observatory. With each tick of the clock there is a contact of two points. These two points are attached to wires that lead to an electro-magnet attached to the arm that holds the pen of the chronograph. The clock is so adjusted that each minute the pen jumps to one side. Consequently there is a break in the line.

There are other breaks, too, when the observer watches the stars cross the lines in the field of the telescope. The mean time thus recorded for each star, after being corrected for errors, is the clock time of the star's transit. Whatever difference there is between the clock time and the sidereal time marked by the transit of the stars is the error of the clock. From these astronomical observations the sidereal time is obtained. The error amounts to but little, rarely being more than from five one-hundredths to ten one-hundredths of a second.

The time of sending a flash over the wires is practically nothing. A flash has reached Greenwich, England, in three months of a second—Washington Cor. Chicago later Ocean.

First Wheel Clock.

Some say that Archimedes made the first wheel clock as early as 200 B. C. Others give credit to Wallingford, who lived so late as the beginning of the fourteenth century. But the most perfect water clocks were, long before the latter period, furnished with wheels, so that the only improvement was the substitution of a solid body to act as a moving weight instead of water. It is not to be wondered, at that the application of a weight to clocks as a moving power should attract so little attention, as water and sand were undoubtedly thought more convenient by contemporary writers. The oldest complete clock moved by weights is probably that sent by the sultan of Turkey to Frederick II. in 1232. In the thirteenth century many of the church steeples in Italy were furnished with clocks moved by weights, which struck the hours. Hele of Nuremberg is supposed to have constructed the first watch in 1500, and to him must also be given the credit of the spring clock. The fusee was probably invented in England about the end of the sixteenth century. But it was not until the middle of the seventeenth century that the pendulum was first applied to clocks by Huyghens.

Boar Hunting in Brittany.

Boar hunting in Brittany is full of exciting incidents, and the boars seldom die unavenged, for, though they are beset by mounted hunters and peasants on foot armed with guns, the lifeblood of many a boar is drawn before the savage old tuskier yields up his life. His dangerous powers of offense cease only with his last gasp. Though the grip of the bulldog, the yelping of the hounds, the din of horns and the cries of the hunters may force him from his lair to seek refuge in flight, that withdrawal may be set down rather to prudence and disgust than to any fear. When at last he is brought to bay, with his back against a rock or a tree trunk, he is ready to defy a host. Met in a narrow alley of the forest, neither man nor horse can withstand the avalanche of his onset. Not infrequently the hunter who loves his hounds will feel but little triumph even in the death of many boars if, having begun the season with a large pack, he ends it with a miserable remnant, having left all his best and bravest dogs on the field of battle.

Two Ways of Telling It.

Once upon a time a Persian king in his sleep dreamed that all of his teeth fell out before him, one by one. He summoned a soothsayer and asked him to interpret the dream.

The soothsayer said, "O king, the meaning of thy dream is that thy family and relatives shall die in thy presence, one by one, till all are gone." The king was very angry at that and sent the soothsayer at once to prison.

Then he sent for another soothsayer and again asked for an interpretation of the dream.

The soothsayer made answer, "O king, the interpretation of thy dream is that thy family and relatives shall die, one by one, and thou thyself shalt outlive them all."

With this answer the king showed approval and commanded that a present be given to the interpreter and that he should be sent home with honor.

Exception to the Rule.

"I have a boy in my school of whom I am very fond," said a New York teacher smilingly, "but I fear to think what his future may be."

"Indeed? Does he evince—er—criminal tendencies?" some grave person who had missed the smile inquired.

"Well, I am afraid he may become a writer for funny papers," the teacher suggested tentatively. "You see, I was having a history review one day, and I asked this boy who was Peter the Great. He answered, 'A czar of Russia.'"

"And was there more than one Peter the Great?" I asked.

"He appeared to ponder for a moment and then replied, 'No, Miss Mary, that was a case in which history didn't re-Pete itself.'—Judge.

"The Picnic Stratch."

Though a brilliant conversationalist, George Meredith had, of course, his silent moods, and he happened to be in one of them at a certain picnic. Next to him sat a lady, herself a good talker, who had been looking forward to this meeting for days and, and it may be guessed, preparing for it in vain. The only sentence that passed his lips was when he reached slightly across her for the salt—"Excuse the picnic stretch."—Manchester Guardian.

Very Affectionate.

Mr. Headstall—That horse you brought yesterday seems a vicious looking animal. Is he affectionate?

Mr. Cropper—Affectionate? I should think so. Why, when he came out of the stable he stood upon his hind legs and tried to embrace me.

The Best Clubs.

They tell a story in Wall street that Mr. Morgan once replied to a young friend who had asked him what were the best clubs to belong to in New York, "Young man, the very best clubs to devote your time to are Indian clubs."

Foiled Him.

Country Drummer, (with cigars)—Pardon me; have you a match? Village Lawyer (tentatively)—Yes, but I haven't one secure, Country Drummer—Good! In that case you won't need the match!—Chicago News.

Take care of your health. You have as right to become a burden to yourself and perhaps to others.—Hall.

TEACHING HORSES TO JUMP.

There Are Three Methods Used—Coaching, Lunging and Driving.

There are three methods of teaching a horse to jump—coaching, lunging and driving. In the coaching method the young horse is turned into a small paddock having a low hedge or hurdle across the center. In plain view of the pupil a rider on a veteran jumper should take him over the hurdle several times.

The trainer then goes to the opposite side with a measure of corn or oats and calls the horse, shaking up the grain and pouring it with his hand back and forth in the receptacle. The boundary will soon be cleared, and when a few mouthfuls have been eaten at the station of the instructor should be at the other side of the hurdle and the lesson repeated. If this be done daily the hurdle may be gradually heightened.

The habit of jumping is thus acquired without those risks which attend a novel performance when a heavy burden oppresses the strength and whip and spur distract the attention. The horse's body, says Country Life in America, is not partially disabled by the imposition of a heavy load before the powers are taxed to the utmost and his capabilities are unfeathered.

The second method is termed lunging. A long rein or cord is attached to the bit, and the animal is exercised in a circle in which a hurdle has been placed or a shallow ditch dug. A long lashed whip, used only to keep him in motion or lightly applied at the proper moment, will keep him up to his work. Soon the horse will enter into the spirit of the occasion and by unmistakable signs will manifest his enthusiastic enjoyment of the exercise.

The third method, driving, is exactly what its name implies. At first the obstruction should be slight. Any open space will answer the purpose, an earth or sod surface or tankard being preferable. Long reins, a straight bar or snaffle bit, a long whip and patience and perseverance are required.

All things considered, the driving method is the quickest and surest way of teaching the horse to jump. When he has become somewhat proficient, having thoroughly learned what is required of him, the saddle may be called into requisition and the practical lessons begun.

Almost any young horse can be taught to jump. Of course his proficiency will depend on the care bestowed on his training and on his general characteristics of wind, limb and nerve. An ordinary cob or Morgan will attain the proficiency of an Irish hunter, but any horse that is used for a saddle will be of far greater value to his owner if he can be taken occasionally for a cross country ride and put over ditches and low obstructions.

Ethics and Morality.

If a woman's husband has been silly enough to take more wine than is good for him, morality would lead her to send him to bed. Ethics would lead her to send him to Coventry. And ethology would probably lead her to send him to a penal settlement for inebriates.

If a man's wife throws a teapot at him as happened recently in the aristocratic neighborhood in which I live, morality would lead him to go out of the house for an hour or so and give her nerves a chance. Ethics would probably induce him to go out of the town and write to her from a garden city that their temperaments were incompatible. What ethology would make him do I hardly dare to think.—Chesterton in Illustrated London News.

More Accurate.

The pastor and his wife had called upon a member of the congregation, a widow with a small but exceedingly lively boy, and were on their way home. "Well," said the preacher, "she seems to be a very intelligent woman anyhow."

"Yes."

"And very positive in expressing her opinions."

"On the contrary," said his wife, "she struck me as being strongly negative."

"Negative? How?"

"Everything she said to her little boy began with a 'Don't, Johnny!'"—Exchange.

DETECTIVE STORIES.

Little Things as Aids in Solving Problems in Crime.

THE VALUE OF SMALL CLEWS

"In All My Experience," Says Police Sergeant Cuff, One of Wilkie Collins' Creations, "I Have Never Yet Met Such a Thing as a Trifle."

If you ask some London publishers they will tell you that no book sells so well as a detective story and that people still find a fascination in the achievements of Edgar Allan Poe's Dupin, Gaboriau's Lecoq and Taboré and the redoubtable Sergeant Cuff of Wilkie Collins.

These men were the forerunners of Sherlock Holmes, and their feats of criminal tracking were as remarkable as those achieved by the famous character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Perhaps the least known is Cuff, who figures in "The Moonstone."

Cuff looked for clues in trifles. In investigating a smear on a newly painted door, he was told by the superintendent who had the case in hand that it was made by the petticoats of the women servants. The superintendent said petticoats were trifles.

"In all my experience along the dirtiest ways of this dirty little world," replied Cuff, "I have never met such a thing as a trifle yet. We must see the petticoat that made the smear, and we must know for certain that the paint was wet."

Lecoq, the beau ideal of the French detective, was wont to explain his deductions to assistants, just as Sherlock Holmes did to his friend Watson. In the story of "The No. 112" a safe has been robbed. There is a scratch on the door of the safe which seems to have been made by the key slipping from the lock. But Lecoq explained that the paint was hard and that the scratch could not have been made by the trembling hand of the thief letting the key slip.

He therefore had an iron box made, painted with green varnish, like the safe. As Lecoq inserted the key he asked the assistant to endeavor to prevent him using the key just as he was about to insert it in the lock. The assistant did so, and the key held by Lecoq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door and traced upon it a diagonal scratch from top to bottom, the exact reproduction of the one shown in a photograph of the safe. Thus it was proved that two persons were present at the robbery—one wished to take the money and the other to prevent its being taken.

In the play Sherlock Holmes, the detective, with the aid of an accomplice, raises an alarm of fire at the house of the Larrabees, during the excitement of which he is able to investigate the mystery of the pirated documents.

A somewhat similar incident occurs in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Purloined Letter," when Dupin, having obtained entrance to the house of a minister of the state who had purloined a letter of great importance from a lady, wished to take it from its hiding place—a card rack over the mantelpiece—and substitute a facsimile. While Dupin was talking to the minister there was a sudden report of a pistol, beneath the window, followed by fearful screams and loud shouting. The minister rushed to the window, and while his attention was thus distracted Dupin took the real letter and substituted the false one which he had prepared. Needless to say, the diversion had been created by Dupin's assistants.

Although "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" somewhat overshadow the stories of other detectives which appeared in the Strand Magazine, one should not forget to mention Martin Hewitt, investigator, and Dick Donovan.

Both these detectives worked alone and were past masters in the art of solving robbery mysteries, murders and the crimes of secret societies.

And the value of trifling trifles, particularly in detective work, is strikingly illustrated in "The Case of Mr. Fogart." The latter had been murdered in his chamber, which was situated at the top of the building in which Hewitt had an office. Hewitt was the first one on the scene. The door was locked, and when he got inside the room he found Fogart lying across the table, shot dead. There was a sheer drop of fifty feet outside the window. How had the murderer got in, and how had he escaped?

On the sideboard were the freshly bitten remains of an apple. Hewitt noticed that it had been bitten by a person who had lost two teeth, one at the top and one below. He also saw that the dead man had an excellent set of false teeth, with none missing. He observed, too, that a native young man could, by standing on the window sill, draw himself out the roof and thus escape. Thus Hewitt comes to look for a tall, athletic looking young man with two teeth missing. He finds him, obtains by a ruse another apple which he has bitten, compares the two and ultimately obtains the startling story of the murder from the murderer himself after the coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "accidental death."—London Tit-Bits.

It is the little pleasures which make life sweet, as the little displeasures may do more harm than afflictions can to make it bitter.

Confide a secret to a dumb man and it will make him speak.—Lironian.

An Independent Miller.

When Frederick built his famous palace of Sans Souci there happened to be a mill that greatly hampered him in the execution of his plans, and he asked the miller for how much he would sell it. The miller replied that for a long series of years his family had owned the mill, which had passed from father to son, and that he would not sell it for any price. The king used every solicitation, offered to build him a mill in a better place and pay him, besides, any sum he might demand, but the obstinate miller still persisted in his determination to preserve the inheritance of his ancestors.

Irritated at last by his conduct, the king sent for him and said in an angry tone:

"Why do you refuse to sell your mill notwithstanding all the advantages I have offered you?"

The miller repeated his reasons. "Do you know," continued the king, "that I could take it without giving you a penny?"

"Yes," returned the miller calmly. "If it were not for the chamber of justice at Berlin."

The king was so flattered by this answer, which showed that he was capable of an act of injustice, that he dismissed the miller without further entreaty and changed the plan of his garden.

A Philosopher's Fable.

Arthur Auli is responsible for this one:

"Folly, Genius and Common Sense once went walking and came to a stream. Genius, having his head in the clouds, naturally started to wade across, paying no attention to the depth. The waters soon went over his head, and he was drowned. Common Sense hunted for a safe way to get across, and finally he found a foot log. As he got out about the center of the stream the log awayed, and he fell into the water and sank to rise no more. Folly stopped at the bank of the stream to muse himself by throwing pebbles into the water and watching the waves. He sat upon the moist, cold bank until he caught a cold which developed into pneumonia, of which he soon died. Moral.—It doesn't make much difference, after all, whether you are a genius, a sage or a fool. You'll get it sooner or later anyway."—Exchange.

Told to Earn His Own Salary.

Commodore Vanderbilt discovered in James H. Rutter, then in the employ of the Erie railroad, a man he believed the freight department of the Central needed, says the Baltimore News. It is related that some time after he took charge of the Central's traffic office Rutter called on the commodore to submit a plan for improvement. When he had stated the case the president looked at him sharply and asked:

"Rutter, what does the New York Central pay you $15,000 a year for?"

The reply was, "For managing the freight traffic department."

And then the commodore said, "Well, you don't expect me to earn your salary for you, do you?"

Rutter went out and carried through his plan on his own judgment. The result was highly satisfactory. Rutter became president of the Central.

Up to Snuff.

A man in workman's garb one day called at a local dentist's, and the door was opened by a maid.

Workman—Is the gent in that draws teeth?

Servant—No, sir, but I expect he will be in shortly.

Workman (pansing on doorstep)—Does he give gas?

"Yes."

"What does he charge?"

"One dollar."

"What—one dollar? Do you mean to say, miss, a fellow's got to swallow over 1,000 feet of gas to have one tooth pulled out? No fear, I reckon I know a bit about it, for I work down in the gas works myself. I'll go to another dentist and have it pulled out without gas."—Exchange.

Not Interested.

"I have called," said the book agent, "to see if I can interest you in a little work."

"Young man," snapped the woman who answered the door, "just now I am interested in washing my dishes, dusting, cleaning up after the paper-hanger, making six beds, polishing the hardwood floors, ironing my husband's shirts, getting two more meals today, darning blue pairs of stockings and struggling my sweet pens, and I might say that that's more work than you men ever thought of doing. No; you can't interest me in any more."—Detroit Free Press.

Getting an Early Start.

"Father, what do you wish me to be when I grow up?"

"The same as I am, my son—a lawyer."

"Then instead of wasting any more time on arithmetic, geography and such truck I'd better be getting at the hypothetical question, hadn't I?"—Judge.

JEAN AUDLEY

BOBS UP AGAIN

Mysterious Woman Prefers to Bid Goodbye to Trigg Co. Rather Than Have Warrant Served.

Cndiz, Ky., Aug. 31.—A warrant has been issued by County Judge Bingham against Jean Audley, the mysterious woman who has been staying in the neighborhood of Cerulean Springs since early last spring, but when Deputy Sheriff Lea Davis went out to arrest her, she agreed to leave the county at once if he would allow her, which he consented to, and she at once left in the direction of Caldwell county.

Jean, as she is familiarly called, made her appearance in this section of the State last winter, shortly after Christmas, in the northern part of Christian county, and remained there for some time, when she came to the Cerulean neighborhood, where she has been since. She appears to be about 40 years of age and weighs only about ninety pounds. She rides a small shabby-looking pony and has four dogs with her, and has two or three pistols, one of which, at least, she generally has close at hand all the time. She seems to be well educated and is a good conversationalist, and has told several different tales as to her object in living in this way.

She sleeps outdoors, except in rainy, bad weather, when she goes into someone's barn or outhouse. She generally uses her pony or one of her dogs for a pillow, and when the weather was cold she would sleep between her pony and her dogs and covered with a blanket. She begs something to eat from the citizens around where she is, and likewise feeds her pony from the corn fields or pastures of the citizens. She talks very freely to most everyone until they would begin asking her something about herself and her object for living in this way, when she would give them to understand that that was her business and her secret. She claimed to be from Texas.

COAL PRODUCTION FALLS OFF.

Decrease in Both Output and Price Per Ton Shown in Kentucky.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Kentucky coal mining operations for 1908 were attended by both a decrease in production and a decline in the price per ton, according to the United States Geological Survey. The State's total production of coal was 10,246,553 short tons, with a spot value of $10,317,162. There was a falling off of 596,571 short tons, a decrease in value of $1,087,876 and a decline in average price of $1.06 to $1.01.

The State's coal mines gave employment to 16,996 men in that year, but according to official figures, the number of working days was reduced from 210 in 1907 to 186 in 1908. It is pointed out as an interesting factor in this connection that more than two-thirds of the coal mining operations in Kentucky are conducted on the non-union basis and in consequence the eight hour day is not so generally observed as in other coal mining States.

The steady improvement in the productive capacity per employee for each day has been due in a large degree to the increased use of coal mining machinery. The machine mined product increased from 2,813,865 short tons in 1907 to 5,252,754 short tons in 1908.

When mining first began, it is estimated that the original coal supply in the State was more than 104,000,000,000 short tons. From this original supply, it is said only two-tenths of one per cent. has been mined.

Ohio County Fair.

Again we bid a cheerful welcome to the most delightful season of the year, when the summer's work will soon be over and all look forward to a season of recreation and pleasure at the Twenty-Fourth Annual Ohio County Fair, to be held at Hartford, September 8, 9, 10 and 11, 1909. Everybody needs an outing, and this is a very cheap, easy and pleasant place to get it. We feel that the people of Ohio and adjoining counties appreciate the efforts of the management to give them a Fair second to none in this part of the State, and thus encouraged they have put forward this year an extraordinary effort to entertain their patrons as never before. But they need the assistance of the public, and we take this means of inviting everybody to be present at the coming Fair, and take part in it and assure all the people that they want them to co-operate with them in making our Fair a magnificent success. Now is the time to begin making your preparations. Watch every opportunity to provide something that will help the exhibition, and enable you to make a creditable display for yourself and your neighborhood. If you cannot prepare more than a single specimen, provide that; for if everybody does likewise there will be a mammoth display. Every person should be public-spirited, and value as the best part of the award, the welfare of the industry represented, and the honor of securing a prize over ambitious competitors. When you have entered your articles, come and see how they look when compared with others. If you don't feel like making an exhibit, come to the Fair two or three days and help swell the crowd. The company wants to both better the number and character of exhibits and enlarge the crowd that will pass through the gates. Anything you can do to help in either particular will be appreciated.

Each year they aim to engage and procure as many as possible of instructive, elevating exhibitions, games and amusements, kindred to the scope and purpose of a Fair and all the available rare and striking novelties that the genius of the times has been able to invent to enliven, enrich and make these occasions entertaining, enjoyable, educational, amusing and enlightening, thus assuring an unusually attractive and elaborate program of everything conspicuous that can lend charm or fascination, or make the Fair grand, diffusive, alluring and pre-eminent in features of instruction and entertainment. Considering the preparations, it will be a mystery inexplicable if the management doesn't hold the best Fair this year that this community has ever been permitted to witness.

In Honor of Miss Whittinghill.

The party given by the girls at the home of Miss Effie Render in honor of Miss Whittinghill last Saturday from 8 to 11 p. m., was highly enjoyed. Those present were:
